

Text.

20. The texts of messages must be readily understandable. Technical terms must be kept to the minimum necessary for transacting business. Serial numbers and test words or numbers readily identifiable as such may be used by financial or commercial institutions when specifically authorized to use them.

21. Any commodity involved in a message must be clearly stated in the text.

22. If any third party is mentioned or indirectly referred to in the text, the name and address of such third party must be stated on the message form at the time of filing.

Signature.

23. All messages must be signed in sufficient detail to identify clearly the sender. Message forms must bear sender's address and identification card date and number, and if the sender is acting on behalf of an individual, firm or organization, full mention of the latter's identity and address must be stated on the message form in addition to the sender's connection therewith.

24. Both first name and family name must be given.

25. Licences or special authorization. When filing messages concerning transactions for which a licence or special authority is necessary, the authorizing agency and the licence number must be stated on the message form.

26. Additional information. Additional information may be required on specific messages at the discretion of Censorship.

27. Language. German, English and French are permitted. Other languages may from time to time be added to this list.

28. The following are prohibited:

- a) "Collect" messages.
- b) Registered addresses and private codes except as specifically authorized by Censorship.
- c) The insertion of private or personal communications in the text of commercial messages.

Special requirements for external messages

29. All external messages must be filed in person at a telegraph office of the Reichspost.
