

30. The sender's identity must be established at the time of filing a message, by exhibition of Identification card in the case of individuals or, in the case of others, by such means as may be determined by Censorship.

31. Verbatim confirmations of postal, cable, radio, telegraph or telephone communications, except confirmations of money transfers, are prohibited.

Section IV — Telephone regulations

32. In addition to the General Regulations the following regulations apply in particular to all telephone calls. They do not, however, apply to official government and press communication#

33. Conversations must be readily understandable. Code may not be used. Censorship may refuse to permit a call in a language other than German, English or French.

34. Information required. When making application for any external call the following information must be submitted:

- a) The full name (first and family names) and nationality of the calling and called parties and of any other persons who will participate in the conversation.
- b) The number and date of issue of the identification card of the party or parties located in Germany.
- c) The occupation and, where applicable, the business connection of each person participating in the conversation.
- d) The permanent business address of all parties. If a party has no business address, the address of his permanent residence will* be given.
- e) The listing (including full name and address) of the telephones located in Germany to be used on the call.
- f) The proposed topic of conversation, i. e., whether business or social — if business, the exact subject must be given, such as oil, coffee, etc.
- g) The language to be "spoken.
- h) Additional information may be required at the discretion of : Censorship.

35. External calls must be made by application to the operator, rather than by means of automatic or dialing devices. <sup>36</sup>

36. No external calls may be made from unattended public telephones. Parties speaking from hotels, hospitals Or similar places, must be properly identified by the management or other acceptable authority.