

- a) the detection of objects or obstacles; or
 - b) the determination of the position of vehicles, aircraft, ships, submarines or missiles; or
 - c) the remote and the automatic control of vehicles, aircraft, ships, submarines or missiles; or
 - d) the destruction of living matter, except for specifically medicinal and public health purposes.
7. All electronic methods of coding and the achievement of speech security.
 8. The chemicals specified in Schedule C.
 9. The methods of manufacture (but not the methods of utilization) of the chemicals specified in Schedule D.

SCHEDULE "B"

φ

APPLIED SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH/ REQUIRING PRIOR PERMISSION

1. Electromagnetic, infra-red and acoustic radiation which has at its purpose:
 - a) communication of intelligence by telephony or telegraphy; or
 - b) provision of public broadcast or television services; or
 - c) location of fixed transmitters by direction finding methods; or
 - d) other applications not banned under Schedule "A".
2. Valves, tubes or other devices which employ emission of electrons, either thermionic or from cold surfaces.
3. Industrial explosives.
4. Ball and roller bearings.
5. Ammonia and methanol produced by high pressure hydrogenation.
6. Synthetic oil.
7. Radioactivity other than for medical purposes.
8. Synthetic rubber.
9. The methods of utilization of the chemicals specified in Schedule "D".