

be found or used. The basic shaping of social equality by means of the abolition of exploitation, the creation of the socialist relations of production and the change of the character of the work for the first time opens the real possibility to create the law in such a manner that it is not only formal and therewith an ostensible proportion of equality but is the form of expression and creation of a genuine human community by its function and structure. The authors found their explanations chiefly on the basic theoretic statements of Karl Marx the 150th birthday of which we remember this year.