

accordance with the arrangement of her family life.

In this connection it is of importance to apply the experiences gained by the party of the working class and the state to the future and the same time to improve the work of the public organs, factories and institutions in such a manner that the position of the problems is well considered in the system of all tasks. The questions connected with the further advancement of the conditions for the development of the woman must take the right place in the prognosis, in perspective planning and in public practice — often already in calculating scientific results — and in all partial spheres of social practice.

Territorial Coordination of Socialist Rationalization and the Communities

by Guenter Gerlach and Kurt Schubert

Socialist rationalization is a complex process which also concerns the towns, municipalities, districts and counties. The measures of rationalization of the factories in the territory must be coordinated with each other after differentiated economic views and with respect to management and also corresponding with the complex development of the municipality, town, district and county. In territories in which are congested areas of industry thereby develop territorial complexes of rationalization. For the co-acting of the local organs of state power, the factories and the managing organs must be created with respect to the position of the local organs as public organs common forms, in accordance with Art. 42 (2) of the socialist constitution of the GDR.

Starting from the already existing experiences in industry the authors examine the question in how far these must also be used in the territorial coordination of the socialist rationalization and are to be reconsidered in a law of the communities to be worked out in the future. In the territorial complexes of rationalization mainly two kinds of relations of the communities grow which are to be differentiated from one another but which are closely connected:

— relations between the partners which are due to reach an agreed planning of the tasks and to coordinate measures of management (community of planning and management),

— relations for a common observance of the tasks of socialist business activity, e. g. for the common realization of investments (economic community).

The authors foremost deal with legal questions of the foundation, position and acting of the community of planning and management.

Keeping Clean the Air - Important Concern of the Socialist Public and Social Order

by Guenther Grundmann, Henry Hutschenreuter and Gerhard Woehe

The scientific-technical revolution unintentionally also involves negative appearances which can however be limited and overcome by the important advantages of the socialist relations of production. The authors investigate these problems by hand of the growing contamination of the air in the course of the emissions of industry, traffic and house coal whereby even in congested industrial areas all three sorts of emission appear together and partly go be-