

defend their economic existence against the economic pressure of monopoly capital the pools of food production strive after a more effective rulership in agriculture through the producers' communities. By means of the legislation and aimed measures of encouragement the Bonn state directs the activities of the producers' communities in such a way as desired by the monopolies. Thus it consciously contributes to a further expeditious social differentiation among the farmers, to an increasing capitalist change of structure.

The Expansion of the West German Chancellor's Dictatorship
by the Reactionary Reform of the Cabinet

by Wolfgang Baufeld

This contribution informs on content and aims of the reform of the cabinet intended in West Germany as one part of the "inner reform of the state" of the monopolist system of rulership.

By the reform of the cabinet the total dictatorship of the Chancellor is prepared. It is orientated by the reactionary presidency system as practiced in the USA. The reform of the cabinet in the frame of a new formation of the Federal Government is directed on an unrestricted rule of the Chancellor and by which the cabinet corresponding with the Fascist government of the Reich shall function as the "Council of the Führer". At the same time the position of the Federal Chancellor to parliament shall be expanded. In the forms of the Chancellor's dictatorship the increasing process of the transition to an open dictatorship of the armament managers finds its public legal reflection.
